

There's a phase of growth that looks exactly like everything falling apart.

The job stops working.

The relationship, the habits,
all at once.

The alchemists had a name for it.

Nigredo.

Sandro Dalla Torre

The blackening.

Sandro Dalla Torre
@thesunchi

Everything solid dissolves before something new can form.

What feels like collapse is compost.

Your nervous system reads it as danger.

Sleep breaks, the mind races,
you feel like you're losing it.

Sandro Dalla Torre
@thesunchi

You're not losing it.

The old operating system is crashing.

What comes after is clarity.
But it only arrives once you stop running from the dark.

Sandro Dalla Torre

So if it's all falling apart, it isn't going wrong.

Compost is the most fertile ground there is.
